

Ravens are social, intelligent and highly communicative creatures, just like wolves. Various cultures refer to ravens as "wolf birds." As scavengers, they are tied to large predators like wolves for food sources. Ravens vocalize to draw attention or even lead wolves to carcasses so that the wolves can open the hide to provide food. Ravens have been known to grab sticks and tease and play with wolf pups. There are theories that individual ravens develop bonds with individual wolves within a pack and may even follow the wolf if it disperses from the pack.

www.californiawolffoundation.org